

Pesticides May Be Key Culprit in Bee Deaths

Bees, which play a key role in California's food production, have been dying off at alarming rates. Some beekeepers think they've homed in on the cause: a new class of human-friendly pesticides. Reporter Sasha Khokha interviews PAN's Organizing & Media Director, Paul Towers.

Listen Now » | KQED's California Report

KQED

Source URL: <http://www.panna.org/media-center/press/pesticides-may-be-key-culprit-bee-deaths>