

Manufacturer Pulls Controversial Pesticide

The makers of methyl iodide, a controversial chemical that state pesticide regulators approved for use in California strawberry fields, now says it's suspending sales of the product in the U.S. The decision comes after a long battle over whether it's safe for farmworkers to be exposed to the substance.

Listen Now: KOED's California Report »

KQED

Source URL: <http://www.panna.org/media-center/press/manufacturer-pulls-controversial-pesticide>