

Tougher Regulations For Pesticides

A new report looking at a number of studies related to childhood health issues is pointing a big finger at pesticides.

The research backed by an anti-pesticide group tries to show new links between chemical use and issues like childhood cancer, ADD, and even obesity.

KCLU's Lance Orozco reports from Santa Paula, where a coalition of community activists released the report locally.

Listen Now | NPR»

Source URL: <http://www.panna.org/media-center/press/tougher-regulations-pesticides>